Andrew Young: Horizons 2 and The River (Migrations)

Humans impact the natural world with documented consequences. Deforestation, soil depletion and erosion, habitat stress, mass extinctions, pollution and climate change are the big stories of our lifetime. Current thinking urges us to understand our connection with nature as a relationship based on shared necessity...

The word for that relationship is ecology—the knowledge of our intertwined, vital connection with other living beings and our environment. When we see ourselves as a part of a relationship with the natural world, part of the ecology, then we can take action to care and protect it. – DS.
